

Chicago Tribune contracts GIS to sell all FCN Production Facility equipment

A significant amount of well-maintained inserting and mailroom equipment is now available for sale.

Brian Karnick, Chicago Tribune's vice president of operations, signs the "Exclusive Reseller" agreement with GIS's Bruce Barna.

Chicago, IL - Following the closing of Chicago Tribune's Freedom Center North (FCN) production facility, GIS was contracted to immediately begin selling all of the mailroom and post-press equipment within the entire production facility. GIS will also offer complete dismantling, reconditioning, relocation, installation, operator training and commissioning to the equipment buyers. "We've been doing a lot of work with the Tribune Company and when this opportunity arose we were eager to help the Chicago Tribune find a home for their well-maintained post-press and mailroom equipment. We have an extensive customer base always looking for great values on existing post-press and mailroom equipment", commented GIS's Bruce Barna. "We have a lot of positive experience with GIS, including an installation they are currently completing at our Tribune Direct production facility. GIS also has the industry contacts to help us quickly sell our excess equipment inventory", stated Brian Karnick, Chicago Tribune's vice president of operations.

GIS has over 35 years of experience supplying the newspaper industry with mailroom equipment, parts and service, along with plant consolidation consulting and mailroom equipment brokering services.
